La Bodega

Owners Ken and Jeannette Flores-Katz were brought together by a passion for food, culture and traditions. In spring 2012, they opened Buenos Dias Cafe in downtown Atlanta. The pair was inspired by El Salvador's open street markets, the flavors of San Francisco's melting pot, the accessibility of New York City's bodegas, the familiarity of small-town Italian shopkeepers and the island flavors found in Miami. Together the couple was determined to bring the culture of community and local food to Atlanta. Along with them, they bring over 40 years of dining and hospitality experience. Selecting their products with care from farmers and vendors with the neighborhood in mind, they created La Bodega. Whether you're looking for fresh seasonal ingredients or Latin American inspired meals-to-go, La Bodega is ready to serve. La Bodega's take-out window at the MET features fresh cuisine with vegan and gluten-free options. Serving all-day breakfast and lunch Monday through Saturday you will find their menu includes everything from pupusas and sandwiches to soups, and salads.

Lip Revolt

For Courtney Wright, lipstick has always been a tool for empowerment and a symbol of perseverance. LipRevolt is a cosmetic brand that caters to individuals who identify as women or gender nonconforming, especially women of color, willing to fight for what they believe in and are not afraid to speak up for others. LipRevolt seeks to promote social activism and the belief that you can inspire change and look amazing while doing it. To show their commitment to racial equality, LGBTQ rights, and women’s empowerment, 10% of direct LipRevolt sales are donated to women’s rights organizations and initiatives that support racial equality and the LGBTQ community. At LipRevolt, they offer cruelty-free, vegan, complexion-friendly lip products that encourage beauty with a revolutionary purpose. Their lipsticks have nourishing ingredients such as avocado oil and grape seed oil offering the best of both worlds: the moisturizing properties of a lip gloss and the transfer resistance. Empowered by lipstick shade names like “trailblaze” or “feminist”, customers receive the long-lasting moisturizing relief they need throughout the day for their lips.
